LAND

EcoArt believes in the power of art to raise awareness of climate issues and provoke behavioural change through participatory action. They are a grassroots charity delivering accessible community art projects and workshops. Their 'LAND' project explores climate sentiment from coastal communities in Scotland and beyond. You're welcome to join in.

'LAND': Signals to the World

An environmental arts project that brings people together for climate conversation and creative expression. Participants design and make flags. The designs are added to a growing archive capturing and recording this pivotal moment in time. The flags are flown at events, exhibitions and used to 'dress' tall ships in a stunning and powerful display that signals collective climate concerns, hopes and visions for the future.

There is a free Flag Design Pack to download for yourself or your group. For a more personal touch, engage a 'LAND' artist to host a flag design and make workshop online or in person.

EcoArt is always looking for impactful and imaginative work. EcoArt supports and commissions work from Scotland based environmental artists.

The flags flew at COP26 in Glasgow and will fly again at COP27 in Egypt. So far in 2022 they've appeared around the harbour at the Kirkcudbright Arts & Craft Trail, were racing boat cargo for the Nithraid River Festival and flown on the suspension bridge in Dumfries, they flew on a tall ship for Bell Raid in Annan, decorated the High Street in Forres and flew on tall ship for the Findhorn Bay Festival.
